Pay Final Tribute to Sgt. York

PALL MALL, Tenn. (AP) — Thousands stood under a broiling sun in a country churchyard Saturday to say farewell to Sgt. Alvin C. York, the doughboy hero of World War I.

The onetime conscientious objector who returned from France to a hero's welcome for killing 25 Germans and capturing another 132 was eulogized as the type of Christian American upon which this nation rests its hopes for the future.

The church was crowded to capacity with family, relatives and visiting dignitaries. Among them were retired Gen. Matthew D. Ridgway, President Johnson's personal representative; Tennessee Gov. Frank G. Clement, and Prentice Cooper, former governor and close friend of the Medal of Honor winner.

Estimates of the crowd ranged from 8,000 upwards.

The band of the 82nd Airborne Division — York's old outfit — played hymns. A vocal duet, "God's Way Is the Best Way," was the only music in the chapel, where York once taught Sunday school.

At Wolf River Cemetery, as they did at the church near York's home here and within walking distance of his birthplace, the 82nd fired a 12-gun salute. The body was laid to rest to the sad strain of taps.
