

Noticing that only single seats were vacant, a sweet old lady gave up hers to go sit elsewhere so that Lester and I could be together. All the excursionists in the coach were our friends. We exchanged delicacies from lunch baskets, experiences of other near tragedies and never tired of rehashing this particular one.

It was a lovely day.